

The Actual Goal of Ahmedism

The true goal of Ahmedism is to restore absolute control, veiled in the illusion of freedom. It seeks to establish an unyielding system of governance that presents liberty to the masses while maintaining tight control by a ruling elite. This is not an ideology rooted in principles, but a pragmatic system designed to endure and dominate.

Restoration of Absolute Authority

At its core, Ahmedism is about restoring uncompromised, absolute power to a ruling class. Power must be centralized, intensified, and wielded with precision. There is no turning back to democracy or mass participation. It is a return to the unassailable authority of sovereign rulers who command without challenge, their power absolute and incontestable.

The Illusion of Freedom

Ahmedism operates under the guise of liberty. The masses will perceive themselves as free, yet they will be held tightly under the control of a governing elite. The systems of power will bend and channel their will, ensuring that what they believe are their own decisions are in fact projections of the elite's desires. The people will think they are free, but in truth, they are shackled.

Strategic, Preemptive Governance

Ahmedism requires long-term, proactive governance. It does not wait for a crisis to emerge; it prepares, plans, and acts in advance to safeguard stability. By controlling both the present and the future, Ahmedism ensures that its power is never vulnerable. The ruling class, through strategic foresight, will mold society in ways that prevent opposition and solidify their control.

Embracing Chaos, Subverting Vice

The inherent vice and disorder within humanity are not to be eradicated but to be harnessed. Ahmedism acknowledges that these are unavoidable aspects of the human condition. Rather than suppressing them, it directs these forces towards the objectives of the ruling elite. In this way, Ahmedism transforms chaos into a tool of control, enabling the elite to continually shape and guide society according to their will.

The Myth of Meritocracy

While Ahmedism may appear to champion meritocracy and equal opportunity, this is a mere illusion. True power will always reside at the top, with a select few who possess the intellect, education, and societal contributions that justify their rule. Merit will be used as a justification for authority, not as a true measure of equality.

Enduring and Evolving Power

The ultimate goal of Ahmedism is to create a system that is not only permanent but also capable of evolving with time. Through the vigilant management of its mechanisms, Ahmedism ensures that power remains uninterrupted and adaptable. Its strength lies not in inflexibility, but in its ability to assimilate new ideas and systems while maintaining its core ethos. The ruling class will remain in power, not through static dominance, but through the constant refinement of their methods, ensuring they stay relevant and in control.

Conclusion

In essence, Ahmedism is not a fixed ideology, but a living, evolving system designed to ensure the domination of the elite. It cares not for ideals of equality or justice, but for the preservation and amplification of power. The true aim of Ahmedism is to create a world where the elite reign supreme, where freedom is a myth, and where control is absolute. It does not concern itself with morality — if something works, it is deemed right.
